BABY LOSS SUITE HAS MAKEOVER AT SOUTHEND HOSPITAL

A BABY loss suite has been given a makeover at Southend Hospital.

The private space for grieving families who have lost a newborn has been transformed to make it a more comfortable and tranquil as they spend precious moments with their baby.

The Butterfly Suite in the maternity unit has been painted, received minor repairs, and now has new tiling in the kitchen and bathroom.

Contractors Kirkman and Jourdain carried out the makeover, donating their time, labour and materials.

Bereavement midwife Amanda Cushing said: "Thanks to the generosity of these contractors, there is a fresh feeling to the room and it seems even more homely.

"Because of their kindness fundraising money we would have spent on redecorating and repairs can now go towards more nice things for the room. They have made such a difference to The Butterfly Suite, and for those families who use it."
